“An original documentary (that) shows how one person can make a difference.” -- TV Guide

Description:

Naomi Bronstein’s life was changed forever in one split second: On April 4th, 1975, a picture of her anguished face, at the site of a plane crash in Saigon, made headlines around the world. Her life had intersected with history and, in a tiny moment of time, was changed forever.

She had arranged to evacuate 240 war orphans on the flight – to be adopted in the West. Now, instead of realizing her dream of giving the children new lives in Canada, she was looking at their mangled bodies. The horror of the moment has reverberated through her life and driven her on. Her family of 12 includes 7 adopted war orphans, and she has devoted her life to working with sick and dying children in many parts of the world. This documentary traces her fast-paced life, and highlights an emotional reunion – 25 years on – with orphans who miraculously escaped the crash and did get to Canada. Now, as young adults they are giving back to their adoptive country.

At a time in history when we look around and ask “what can we do?”, Naomi Bronstein’s life holds the answers. This brave and determined lady never once questioned that, no matter the odds, one person can make a difference. And that every tiny life she saved would make a difference too.
